Iceberg Alley: The northeast coast of Newfoundland looks out over what has been dubbed the Iceberg Alley, and every year in June, the town of St Anthony celebrates its annual iceberg festival, as these majestic and colossal islands of ice float serenely south along the coastline.

SOMETHING TO EAT OR DRINK

Fish and Brewis: Cod and hardtack biscuit, with scrunchions (fried pork fat). Read more

Moose Meat: Native to the region, moose has traditionally been hunted and continues to be eaten in various forms, from steaks to sausages.

Jiggs Dinner: A traditional meal of salt beef, figgy duff (steamed pudding made with raisins, molasses, and spices), pease pudding (savory split pea dish), and steamed vegetables. Name is associated with the character Jiggs from the comic strip 'Bringing Up Father'. Read more

Iceberg Beer: The main ingredient in beer is water, so how cool to drink a beer that is made from an Arctic iceberg! Iceberg Beer is a lager made from bergy bits harvested in Iceberg Alley. Look for the cobalt-blue bottles, crafted by Quidi Vidi Brewing Company. Only available in Newfoundland.

LOCAL SOUVENIRS

Thanks to Dr Wilfred Grenfell's huge influence on the region, many local crafts are inspired by his mission to bring modern medicine to Newfoundland, from embroidered coats to hooked rugs.

The area also has a rich fishing tradition, and this is reflected in local arts and crafts too. Fishing Point Emporium 🌐 is a good spot for souvenir shopping, plus there's a free museum onsite to enjoy.
